We'll Need No More Battleships.

Provided the Helland submarine boat obeys her owners' command to dive and teappear, as it seems likely she will, there is no doubt that her advent will produce a change in naval warfare comparable to the exploits of the Monitor. With such a craft approaching a battleship, diving as soon as she comes within range and continuing either deeply submerged or with only a hand or so of a 20 inch turret out of the water, there will be nothing for that battleship to do except either to run or to remain and suffer the successive effects of a score of dynamite explosions.
